

Nuclear Cleanup Project

States will try and get every penny they can from the Government.

Idaho attorneys have asked a federal judge to hold the Department of Energy to an agreement to clean up all the nuclear waste at the Idaho National Laboratory.

The DOE says the 1995 clean-up agreement it reached with the state only covered waste stored above ground, not the toxic trash buried during the cold war in pits and trenches.

The state has filed its closing arguments in a lawsuit against DOE. Now, the federal government will file its written rebuttal.

A ruling could come by the end of March.
