Politicians of all stripes agree that the United States would benefit from a reduced dependence on foreign oil. But that's where the agreement ends. On Thursday, President George W. Bush said the nation "must start building nuclear power plants," which he described as a "key part of a clean, secure energy future."

Bush spoke on the same day that House Minority Leader Nancy Pelosi warned, "We cannot drill our way to energy independence." But some oil industry groups wonder why not. She obviously wasn't listening to him.
