

Nuclear reactor granted license to operate

The new ANSTO nuclear reactor has been granted an operating license

The World Today
July 14, 2006

The new nuclear reactor in Sydney's southern suburbs has been granted a license to operate, but there's still nowhere to put the waste.

The Federal Government plans to build a nuclear waste dump in the Northern Territory, but in the meantime waste from the new reactor will be stored onsite, at Lucas Heights.

And, after several people were exposed to radiation at the site last month, the Federal Opposition is raising concerns about safety at the new facility.