

All nuclear facilities in Russia reliably protected – Rosatom chief

Good preparation with better training than the DOE does in this country.

BELUSHYA GUBA (NOVAYA ZEMLYA ARCHIPELAGO). All Russian nuclear facilities, including nuclear power plants, are reliably protected, Federal Atomic Energy Agency (Rosatom) chief Sergei Kiriyyenko said.

"All nuclear facilities are guarded by the Interior Forces. The restructuring of this sector will leave it this way," Kiriyyenko told journalists at Novaya Zemlya Archipelago on Wednesday.

In 2005 alone, 364 training exercises were conducted, including anti-terrorist ones, which confirmed that all operating nuclear power plants and other nuclear facilities are reliably protected, he said.
